Norwegian Wood is a 1987 novel by Japanese author Haruki Murakami. The novel is a nostalgic story of loss and burgeoning sexuality. It is told from the first-person perspective of Toru Watanabe, who looks back on his days as a college student living in Tokyo. Through Watanabe's reminiscences, readers see him develop relationships with two very different women—the beautiful yet emotionally troubled Naoko, and the outgoing, lively Midori. The novel is set in late 1960s Tokyo during a period ...*

"An easy step into Murakami's world" "Norwegian Wood" is the song by the Beatles that Toru loves so much as it reminds him of his love Naoko. He met her at school (she was his late best friend's girlfriend) and the book tells us his and...

Norwegian Wood by Haruki Murakami | Waterstones

The novel is atypical for Murakami: seemingly autobiographical, in the tradition of many Japanese "I" novels, Norwegian Wood is a simple coming of age tale set, primarily, in 1969/70, the time of Murakami's own university years.

The events Norwegian Wood relates take place in the late sixties, a period of widespread student unrest. The university Watanabe attends is frequently beset with protests and strikes and, in Watanabe's view, pompous "revolutionary" speeches filled with meaningless clichés. "The true enemy of this bunch," Watanabe thinks, "was not State Power but Lack of Imagination" [p. 57].
